MARYLAND GAZETTE,

Containing the lateſt Advices foreign and domeſtic.

THURSDAY, March 12, 1761.

From the VOYAGES and CRUISES of Commodore WALKER.

WHEN Mr. Walker was ſetting out on his ſecond cruiſe in the Boſcawen private Ship of war, A. D. 1745, a report made by the French Officers, when the ſhip was taken, that a gunner's wife had been murdered on board, began now to be looked upon by the men, as ominous of the Misfortunes which would attend the cruiſe. One of the ſeamen, remarkable for his ſobriety and good character, one night alarmed the Ship, by declaring he had ſeen a ſtrange appearance of a woman, who informed him, among other particulars, that the ſhip would be loſt. The ſtory ſpread among the Crew and laid ſuch hold of the imagination, as would have been attended with the moſt ſerious conſequences, had not Mr. Walker contrived a device for turning it into ridicule, and with great preſence of mind related the following anecdote to the aſſembled ſhip's crew:

In June, 1734, Mr. Walker lying at an anchor at Cadiz, in his ſhip the Elizabeth, a gentleman of Ireland, whoſe name was Burnet, was then on board, going to take his paſſage over to Ireland. This gentleman was a particular acquaintance of Mr. Walker's, and he was extremely fond of him, being a man of great good ſenſe, and very lively in converſation. The night before the affair we ſpeak of happened, the ſubject turned upon apparitions of deceaſed friends, in which this gentleman ſeemed much to believe, and told many ſtrange ſtories as authorities for them, beſides giving ſome metaphyſical arguments, chiefly that the natural fear we had of them proved the ſouls confeſſion of them. But Mr. Walker, who was entirely of another way of thinking, treating all his arguments with ridicule, Mr. Burnet, who was bred a phyſician, was curious to try how far fancy might be wrought on in an unbeliever, and reſolved to prove the power of this natural fear over the nerves: A ſtrange way, you will ſay, to convince the mind by attacking the imagination: Or, if it was curioſity to ſee the operations of fear work on fancy, it was too nice an experiment to anatomize a friend's mind for information only. But perhaps the humour of the thought was the greateſt motive; for he was a man of a gay temper, and frolicſome.

About noon, as they were ſtanding, with more of the ſhips company, upon deck, near the forecaſtle, looking at ſome of the Governor's guard boats making faſt to a buoy of a ſhip in the Bay, in order to watch the money, that it might not be carried out of the country, Mr. Burnet propoſed, as a plan for a Wager, he being a remarkable good ſwimmer, to leap off the gunnel of the ſhip, and dive all the way quite under water, from the ſhip to the boats at that diſtance, and ſo riſe up upon them, to ſtartle the people at watch in them. A wager being laid, he undreſſed, jumped off, and dived entirely out of ſight. Every body crowded forwards, keeping their eyes at the diſtance where he was expected to come up; but he never riſing to their expectation, and the time running paſt their hopes of ever ſeeing him more, it was juſtly concluded he was drowned, and every body was in the greateſt pain and concern; eſpecially thoſe, who by laying the wager, thought themſelves in ſome meaſure acceſſary to his death. But he by skilful diving, having turned the other way behind the ſhip; and being alſo very active, got up by the quarter ladder in at the cabin window, whilſt every body was buſy and in confuſion, at the forward part of the ſhip; then concealing himſelf the remaining part of the day in a cloſet in the ſtateroom, wrapped himſelf up in a linen night gown of Mr. Walker's. Evening coming on the whole ſhip's company being very melancholy at the accident, Mr. Walker retired with a friend or two to his cabin, where, in their converſation, they often lamented the ſad accident and loſs of their friend and dear companion, ſpeaking of every merit he had when living, which is the unenvied praiſe generally given to our friends when they can receive nothing elſe from us. The ſuppoſed dead man remained ſtill quiet, and heard more good things ſaid to his memory than perhaps he would elſe have ever in his life time heard ſpoken to his face. As ſoon as it was night, Mr. Walker's company left him; and he being low in Spirits went to bed, where lying ſtill penſive on the late loſs of his companion and friend, and the moon ſhining direct thro' the windows, he perceived the folding-doors of the cloſet to open; and, looking ſtedfaſt towards them, ſaw ſomething which could not fail ſtartling him, as he imagined it a repreſentation of a human figure, but recalling his better ſenſes, he was fond to perſuade himſelf, it was only the workings of his diſturbed fancy, and turned away his Eyes. However, they ſoon again returned in ſearch of the object; and ſeeing it now plainly advance upon him, in a ſlow and conſtant ſtep, he recognized the image of his departed friend. He has not been aſhamed to own he felt terrors which ſhook him to the inmoſt ſoul. The mate, who lay in the ſteerage at the back of the cabin, divided only by a bulk-head, was not yet a-bed; and hearing Mr. Walker challenge with a loud and alarmed Voice, 'What are you?' ran into him with a candle, and meeting Mr. Burnet in the linen gown, down drops the mate without ſo much as an ejaculation. Mr. Burnet, now beginning himſelf to be afraid, runs for a bottle of ſmelling ſpirits he knew lay in the window, and applied them to the noſe and temples of the ſwooning mate. Mr. Walker, ſeeing the ghoſt ſo very alert and good-natured, began to recover from his own apprehenſion, when Mr. Burnet cried out to him, 'Sir, I muſt aſk your Pardon; I fear I have carried the jeſt too far; I ſwam round and came in at the cabin window; I meant, Sir, to prove to you the natural awe the braveſt men muſt be under at ſuch appearances, and have, I hope, convinced you in yourſelf.' 'Sir, ſays Mr. Walker, (glad of being awakened from a terrible dream, and belief of his friend's death), you have given me a living inſtance; there needs no better proof; but pray take care you do not bring death amongſt us in earneſt.' He then lent his aid in the recovery of the poor mate, who, as he retrieved his ſenſes, ſtill relapſed at the ſight of Mr. Burnet: So that Mr. Walker was obliged to make him intirely diſappear, and go call others to his aſſiſtance; which took up ſome conſiderable time in doing, every body, as Mr. Burnet advanced to them being more or leſs ſurpriſed; but they were called to by him, and told the manner of the cheat, and then they were by degrees convinced of his reality; tho' every one was before throughly ſatisfied of his death. I being perſuaded that this ſtory carries a leſſon in it, which ſpeaks itſelf, ſhall conclude it by mentioning this circumſtance, that the poor mate never rightly recovered the uſe of his ſenſes from that hour. Nature had received too great a ſhock, by which Reaſon was flung from her ſeat and could never regain it afterwards; a conſtant ſtupidity hung around him, and he could never be brought to look direct at Mr. Burnet afterwards, tho' he was as brave a man as ever went, in all his ſenſes, to face death by day light.

Auſtrian Head-Quarters at Dreſden, December 9.

ALL is quiet here, as well as in the Pruſſian Army, the Army of the Empire having retired into Franconia. The Enemy has occupied Freyberg; they extend towards the Confines of Bohemia, and ſome of their Parties appear on the Side of Egra. As it appears that the Enemy is ſtill meditating ſomething, we are upon our Guard; in Conſequence of which, three general Rendezvous have been aſſigned to our Army; namely, Dreſden, Dippolſwalde, and Altenberg. The greateſt Part of the Infantry is cantoned in the Environs of this Capital. The Corps under M. Maguire is at Dippolſwalde; that under M. Laſcy between thoſe two Places. General d'Ayaſſes is at Altenberg, and General Eſterhazy occupies the moſt diſtant Poſts on the Wiſerits. The Enemy has 10 Poſts oppoſite to him at Wilſdruff. General Beck is near Neudorff and Langenbruck, with his Corps of national, Hungarian Militia, with ſome German Battalions, and the two Regiments of Savoy, and Darmſtadt Dragoons. General Vogelſang commands at Bautzen, with a Regiment of Cavalry, and three Battalions; and his Communication with the reſt of the Army is kept open by eight Regiments, moſt of whom are quarter'd beyond the Elbe.

Vienna, Dec. 10. Marſhal Daun is arrived here, he made half his Journey in a Litter, and the other in a Coach. The Surgeons ſay his Wound which he received in the Battle at Torgau with the Pruſſians, will be Healed in three Weeks. Their Imperial Majeſties have honoured him with a Viſit.

Paris, Dec. 12. They are fitting out the following Ships at Breſt, with the utmoſt Expedition; Le Hector, of 74 Guns; Le Couragena, of 74; Le Sage, of 64; L'Achille, of 64; and alſo the following Frigates, La Malicieuſe, 32 Guns; L'Hermione, 32; La Benfenne, 32; La Camele, 32; L'Opalle, and La Brune; but we know nothing of their Deſtination. We are going to put three more upon the Stocks at that Place; and Le Royal Louis, of 116 Guns, is quite finiſhed; it is ſaid to be one of the fineſt Ships ever ſeen, and is Proof againſt 36 Pounders.

Leipſic, Dec. 16. His Pruſſian Majeſty after all his Fatigues, is in perfect Health, and as ſoon as Things can be ſettled in this Electorate, intends to take a Tour to Berlin.

Paris, Dec. 22. An Engliſh Man of War and a Frigate are loſt on the Coaſt of Brittany. The Ship was pierced for 70 Guns, but only 9 were found on board, and not a ſingle Man. It was laden with Plank, and it has already been taken out. The Frigate mounted 40 Guns, had 260 Men on board, of whom 115 periſhed, the Remainder are Priſoners of War.

The King's Frigates the Opalle and Brune have ſent into Breſt 10 Engliſh Ships, which they have taken in a 20 Days Cruize; and ten more Prizes made in 15 Days time, have alſo been ſent into the ſame Port.

LONDON.

Nov. 18. After General Yorke had imparted to the other foreign Miniſters at the Hague, the News of King George the Second's Death, and the Acceſſion of his Grandſon to the Throne of Great-Britain, they all, in Turn, waited on his Excellency, with Compliments of Condolance and Congratulation, as is uſual on ſuch Occaſions, except the French Ambaſſador, who omitted the congratulatory Part in his Harangue; in Conſequence of which Neglect, it is ſaid, Orders have ſince been ſent to General Yorke, to avoid all Intercourſe or Inteviews with the French Ambaſſador, and to ſhun as much as poſſible the Meeting of him any where accidentally.

By Letters from Holland we learn, that the French Ambaſſador is endeavouring to borrow for his Court, from the Merchants of Amſterdam and Rotterdam, two or 3 Millions. But it is thought he will not meet with his uſual Succeſs, Mr. Yorke having remonſtrated, that thoſe two Towns were greatly inſtrumental in protracting the War, by the Aſſiſtance they gave to his Maſter's Enemies.

December 18. They write from Liege of the 8th Inſt. that they had Intelligence from ſeveral Places, that the Hereditary Prince of Brunſwick was advancing at the Head of his Troops towards the the Lower Rhine, which had caused a great Consternation of the Inhabitants near the Banks of the River, having expected those Troops were gone into Winter Quarters.

One Chartier at Paris has invented a Composition, which is authorised by an Arret of the King's Council, for preventing Iron from Rust. It has been applied to various Utensils, and did not disappoint Expectation. It communicates to the Iron, a Colour very much approaching that of Silver, and by incorporating with the Iron, closes its Pores in such a Manner, that no Moisture can enter them.

Yesterday Morning, about six o'Clock, a young Ox went mad in Smithfield, by the Cruelty of the Drovers in beating him over the Legs, &c. The Creature was remarkably furious, tossing every Thing it met: It even attempted to toss some Cocks and Hens, but they were too nimble for him. None of the Drovers themselves dared come near him, one of them being very near killed in attempting to turn him; but the Fellow luckily saved himself by nimbly jumping over the Rails, against which the Ox ran very furiously. He then ran down Hosier Lane, and into the George-Inn Yard, where he made at the Ostler, and tossed him up in the Air, but very luckily for him he fell into the Horse-pond, whereby he saved his Life. He then made up into Holborn, where he was overtaken by some of the Drovers Dogs, two or three of whom pinned him down by the Nose, while the Drovers came with ropes, and led him back to Smithfield, where they secured him.

They write from Leghorn that the Pilot of a Dutch Ship called La Johanna Lamberta and Christiana, commanded by Capt. Adrian Mallaga, has given us the following melancholy Account. The Ship arrived at Goze, in the Island of Candia, on the 3d of August, from St. John D'Acre, otherwise Ptolemais, and being in Want of fresh Water, the Greeks of that Place persuaded the Captain with the Surgeon, and Cook, and 7 Sailors, to come on Shore; when the Capt. Surgeon, and the Cook, were inhumanly murdered by those wretches. The Sailors got to their Boat, and notwithstanding the Greeks fired some Musquet Shot at them, they got safe to their Ship, and arrived here on the 9th. This Affair has been confirmed by the Crew of the Johanna.

Brig. Gen. Gage is appointed Governor of Montreal. Lt. Col. Haviland is appointed Col. of the 3d Battalion of Royal Americans in the room of Col. Lawrence, deceased.

Lt. Col. Burton is appointed Col. of a new Regiment in America.

Lt. Gen. Anstruther, of the 26th Regt. is dead.

Letters from the Hague mention, that the Dutch look upon the King of England's Death as one of the greatest Misfortunes that could befal their State, as he was always disposed to accept of the Apologies made for Irregularities committed by their Subjects, during the present War, without coming to Extremities, from the Regard he had conceived, early in Life, for that Protestant State, on Account of its hearty Concurrence in the Grand Alliance formed by King William against France; and it is for this Reason the States General are sending over an Ambassador Extraordinary.

The last Letters from Paris advise, that the Count de Stahrenberg, the Austrian Minister, had had several Conferences with the Duke de Choiseuil, on the Means of carrying on the War vigorously. The Count desired the Minister to put his Master in Mind of the Engagements he had contracted with the Empress Queen, to which her Majesty would inviolably adhere: That her Majesty had preferred the Alliance of France to the Propofals made her some Time before the War, which tended to nothing less than overturning the whole French Monarchy: And that the first Bait thrown out to her was the Prospect of conquering Alsace and Lorrain, and annexing them to the Dominions of the House of Austria, as an Indemnification for Silesia which was to remain in the King of Prussia's Possession.

The Austrian Minister further added, that as his Prussian Majesty, on the first considerable Check he received, would be forced to make a speedy Peace, the Wirtembergers and a Body of Austrians would, if necessary, join Marshal Broglio's Army, to enable him to secure good Quarters during the Winter in the Electorate of Hanover.

Letters from Altena, of the 17th Inst. advise, that the Russians were again advancing into Pomerania, and that their Motions began to give much Uneasiness.

Yesterday in the Afternoon an Express arrived at the Admiralty from Admiral Boscawen's Seat near Guildford in Surry; and another Express at Court, with Advice, that the Physicians thought the Admiral something better, which gave great Satisfaction to all who heard it. Lord Howe, and several other Persons of Distinction, are gone to see the Admiral. Expresses are sent from the Admiralty continually to the Admiral's Country Seat.

An essential Piece of Service might be performed, which would do more Honour to the Nation than suffering the Ships of War to rot in the Harbours, or upon insignificant Cruizes; namely, an Attack upon the Mississippi Settlements. The Advantage of which, if successful, would not only be in the Conquest, but would strike such an universal Terror among the Cherokees, and all the rest of the Indian Nations, that they would not hereafter presume to take up the Sword against the English, after seeing such repeated Proofs of their Strength and Valour.

MAGDEBOURG, November 18.

A LIST of the Austrian Generals and Officers taken Prisoners is published here, by which there now appears in all to have been 216, together with 46 Pieces of Cannon, three Haubitzers, and one Mortar. To this Number then must be added 26 more Officers, which were taken upon their March towards Torgau.

Vienna, Nov. 12. We were to have sung Te Deum the 9th, for the Victory gained the 3d over the Prussians near Torgau; but upon the Arrival of the second Courier, the Order was countermanded.

Vienna, Nov. 15. The Battle of Torgau has been one of the bloodiest that has happened in the Course of this War. Neither the Season nor Darkness, could slacken the Fury of the Combatants. All the Regiments were engaged, and all have suffered. The Prussian Grenadiers especially bear the Marks of this terrible Day.

Nuremberg, Nov. 18. From all the Letters and Advices received concerning the Battle of Torgau, we put down the Loss, on both Sides, at between 24 and 26,000 Men.

Berlin, Nov. 15. Since the Action of the 3d, scarce a Day passes without the Arrival of some Hundreds of Deserters at his Majesty's Army.

LONDON, December 15.

The Letters from Saxony agree, that the Prussians are much better received than they ever were in that Electorate, the People having felt far severer Hardships when they were driven out, than ever they experienced while they were in Possession, at the same Time that there was no Care at all taken to enable them to provide for their future Subsistence, in which the Prussian Government were extremely punctual; so that till now the Country was never in Danger of becoming a Desart, and which it can now only escape by remaining in their quiet Possession during the Remainder of the Winter and the Spring.

They write from Naples, that the Viceroy of Sicily had sent an Express to Court, to know how they should behave in Case the six English Ships of War which were cruizing off Messina, should want to come into that Port.

Extract of a Letter from Paris, Nov. 21.

"The Issue of the late obstinate Action of Torgau will only tend to protract the War. If the King of Prussia had been Vanquished (which, according to all Appearance, would have been the Case, but for Marshal Daun's Wound) the Business might have been finished. The greatest Loss the Empress has sustained on the Occasion is that of this great Man. Tho' his Wound is not said to be mortal, he will not be able to command during the Remainder of the Campaign. In the mean Time her Majesty, to repair the Check of that bloody Day, has sent Orders into Hungary for raising a Corps of 20,000 new Troops, which will join the grand Army in Saxony before the End of March. As to the rest, they were in no Pain for Dresden, in the Neighbourhood of which the Austrian Army was assembled, to join that of the Empire.

"We have Advice from India of a terrible Hurricane at the Isle of France, on the 27th of January, which overthrew most of the Houses in the Place. Two of the best Ships of M. d'Ache's Squadron were entirely lost, and the rest so much damaged, that there was no Likelihood of his going to the Relief of Pondicherry."

The Court of France went into Mourning the 15th ult. for three Weeks, on Account of the Death of his late Majesty King George the Second.

Dec. 8. The following is the Purport of the Billet which the Empress Queen received the 6th of November at Noon, from Marshal Daun:

"Most gracious Sovereign,

"By the Assistance of the Almighty, the just Arms of your Majesty have once more gained a complete Victory over the King of Prussia near Zinna; the Enemy are defeated, &c.

Nov. 3, 1760. DAUN."

BOSTON, February 16.

Since our last came to Town from Quebec, and Montreal, &c. Capt. John Malcom, of the Sloop Wilmot, and Capt. John Holmes, of the Sloop Sally.

The Advices from his Majesty's Dominions of Canada, are such as with Pleasure we can give the Public, viz.—That all the Troops stationed in the several Parts of that Country, together with the English and French Inhabitants, are well and in high Spirits, having Supplies of almost all Sorts of Provisions:—That great Harmony subsists among the Whole.—Those Inhabitants who but lately were under the Tyrannical Yoke of France, now exult in the Liberty they enjoy under the British Government: No greater Burden is laid on them than they can bear: The British Troops are quartered upon the Inhabitants in proportion to their Circumstances; and whatever they have to dispose of, they are paid for with the strictest Honour, which attaches them greatly to their new Masters, or rather Fathers: Any who are in Want, are supplied with Necessaries suitable for them; Particularly we hear, That on considering the Circumstances of many of the poor Peasants and others, who suffered the Loss of all their Effects, and being under Arms most of the Summer could not raise Grain necessary for their Families, a Contribution was set on Foot at Quebec, and a large Sum of Money collected by the Officers of the Garrison, the English Merchants, &c. &c. to support those Poor during the Winter.

Provisions it is said are brought into Montreal and sold very cheap: Poultry being in great Plenty, is sold at a Quarter of a Dollar for a Turkey, and Dunghill Fowls 3 for a Pistareen; and Wheat at 3 Pistareens per Bushel.

NEW-YORK, February 23.

By a Gentleman Officer who came to Town on Thursday last from Montreal, and who has been from hence to Quebec and back again since we had the account of the King's Death; we are told,—That all the French in Canada of any Distinction, went in Mourning for the late King; —That they have had a very mild Winter in Canada; the Troops all very healthy, and have all the Necessaries of Life in Plenty,—And, that Governor Gage had been address'd by the Officers of the Militia, and Merchants, of Montreal, on the Loss of our Sovereign, in the following Manner, viz.

To his Excellency General GAGE, Governor of Montreal and it's Dependencies.

The ADDRESS of the Officers of the Militia, and Merchants of the City of Montreal.

CRUEL Destiny has then cut short the glorious Days of so great and so magnanimous a Monarch! We are come to pour out our Grief into the paternal Bosom of Your Excellency, the sole Tribute of Gratitude, of a People who will never cease to exalt the Mildness and Moderation of their new Masters. The General who conquered us has rather treated us like a Father than like a Vanquisher, and has left us a precious * Pledge, by Name, and Deed, of his Goodness, to us. What Acknowledgments are we not beholden to make for so many Favours? Ha! they shall be forever engraven in our Hearts, in indelible Characters.

* Gage, in French, signifies Pledge.

We entreat Your Excellency to continue us the Honour of your Protection; We will endeavour to deserve it by our Zeal, and by the earnest Prayers we shall ever offer up, to the immortal Being, for your Health and Preservation.

March 2. Thursday last his Majesty's Ship the Greyhound, of 20 Guns, Captain Francis, arrived at Sandy-Hook, from Spithead, in six Weeks and three Days, and the same Night the Captain came to Town, and delivered his Dispatches to his Excellency General Amherst.—Captain Francis left Spithead the 12th of January, but came off so suddenly that he has brought no public Prints: By him we learn, that the greatest Preparations were making to forward the Grand Expedition, which, in our last, we mentioned to be laid aside: That 18 Sail of the Line were sheathed, and that 200 Sail of Transports were ordered to be sheathed also: That two Expeditions were said to be on the Carpet, viz. one in the West-Indies, and the other designed against the Southern Settlements of the French on this Continent; for which last Expedition a Number of Frigates, and some Fire-Ships, were ordered to be got ready: That the brave

ADMIRAL

DMIRAL BOSCAWEN was dead: That the ing of Prussia's Victory over Count Daun was as mpleat as it possibly could be: And that the eateſt Preparations were making for puſhing on e War with the utmoſt Vigour.
